Description

Hi my name is Britton Burkett and I'm a freshman at Montgomery High School. This is my first year to show an animal and I had high hopes for my market barrow. His name is Poncho and he is a black cross weighing in at 242lbs currently and still growing. He is a very well built pig as his diet and exercise has been my top priority.

When I first began this adventure, I thought it was going to be as simple as taking care of an animal and showing him in the arena. But it has grown to be so much more than that. It's getting up early and putting in hard work and effort among juggling my academics. The long days and nights of constant training, exercising and dedication. I've learned more this year about leadership and self-sacrifice than I ever thought I could. The best part about showing an animal is the amazing bond of trust that I have created with Pancho. Together we run and play and it's so heart warming to see him flop over when I rub his belly.

To say I'm disappointed to not show would be a severe understatement. Me and my fellow ranchers have all felt this crushing blow but this will make us stronger and we will persevere.

My goal is to sell Pancho and to raise enough funds to continue to pursue livestock showing whether that be another pig or another animal. Thank you for taking the time to consider supporting me.
