Description

Hi, my name is Allison Berchtold this is my fourth year in East Union FFA my third year raising Market steers, and my ninth year showing in Ag fest. I had got my steer on November 6th his name is Warner he is an Angus cross from Merced Junior College starting in this past year has been rough for all of us had to get used to constant changes and I am so glad that we get to have a San Joaquin County Ag-fest, raising a steer is hard work and as time goes on my knowledge and wisdom increases when raising a steer you start to develop skills like a responsibility because having any animal is a great responsibility, hard work you have to put in the effort to succeed in life, time management some days may be busier than others but you always need to make time for your project, Money management raising livestock is always expensive so money management can be an amazing skill to develop. Showing cattle is way more than winning ribbons and belt buckles It takes numerous hours in the barn, endless chores, daily washing, regular exercising, blood, sweat, and tears to raise a steer, every minute of every day's effort leads to one brief appearance in the show ring with the outcome resting in a single judge's opinion. Raising Market steers has helped me learn so many skills as I will continue to use these life skills in the future I can not wait to learn more every day from everything around me. I hope you are interested in my Steer and Thank you so much for supporting this year's 2021 Ag-fest.
