Description

Hi, my name is Grace Lacanglacang. I have been heavily involved in FFA for the past three years, whether that be representing my chapter as an officer or going to one of the many events that are held. This year I have finally settled on raising a market rabbit. Through this experience, I have learned many things, including the value of the life of a market rabbit. I will admit, over the past few years I have been skeptical about raising a market product, solely to the fact that I will build a relationship with the animal, in which would soon be processed. However, now that I have finalized my decision, I see the value in raising a market animal. My rabbit, by the name of Ambrose, is giving up her life. Not for any reason, however, but to feed a family. I know that her life and her meat, will not go to waste. I know that she will be appreciated, which brings me to understand the importance of raising a market animal such as Ambrose. Through raising Ambrose, I have learned how to sufficiently manage my time. Not only this but has taught me pure dedication and commitment. It would be greatly appreciated if you would consider buying or sharing my project.

Thank you,

Grace Lacanglacang
