Description

My name is James Chappell, I am a junior at Lodi High School. I take part in a program at school called Ag academy which allows me to explore and learn more deeply and hands-on about agricultural careers and jobs in my area. This is my second year showing a market steer at San Joaquin AgFest, as a Lodi FFA student. My family and I have been raising beef cattle for many years. I am carrying on the tradition from my grandfathers, uncles and dad of raising, training and showing beef cattle. Here is a peek into the things I have learned from my second FFA beef project. An animal that you take into raise, train and show is not just a project and calendar date. To me, it is a dedication to get the best looking and best trained animal. I learned dedication and consistency for the benefit of myself to get in a routine, but most importantly for the wellbeing of my animal. This year's project has taught me patience and allowed me to have an open mind to other peoples thoughts to help me this year. As you can see the project I have been taking head-on for around 8 months has taken lots of research and dedication to the results in which you can see for yourself.
