Description

Hello, my name is Brooke Hostetter and I'm a junior at junior here at James Madison. I have absolutely fallen in love with agriculture, whether that be working as a ranch hand this summer, to being apart of the Tejas Rodeo Drill Team, or competing in all the amazing opportunities our school has to offer.

This year has been full of new and exciting opportunities. In March I purchased my first show steer, and he has been super rewarding at every show I've participated in. Along with my steer I have two show goats. I've been showing goats since my freshman year, and although it is a lot to juggle both species, it has been nothing but fun. In addition to showing livestock I have had the opportunity to serve my school and community as a FFA chapter officer. From helping plan community service events to touring cattle companies, becoming an officer was the perfect way to share my passion for agriculture.

This year alone I have had the chance to compete on our school's tractor tech team, as well as public relations in the Fall. These teams help to set me up for potential career opportunities as well as fostering team work and problem solving skills I hope to take with me into college. I hope to one day become a ranch manager or a large animal vet. Your support to me and my fellow students means so much and is truly impactful in setting us up for career success in agriculture.

Any and all money I receive will be reinvested into my projects for my senior year to help cover the purchase of my animals and costs of other expenses such as feed. My senior year I plan to show a steer and a goat to finish out my days in the show ring strong.

Thank you so much for your support!!
